

Alpha Conservation Corps

An environmental service component

Alpha also offers a full day environmental community stewardship component for high school students in partnership with the Oregon Youth Conservation Corps and other partners. Alpha Conservation Corps students perform environmental restoration work and other service projects in the community in conjunction with science curriculum in the classroom.

Key program features:

- Integration of science curriculum in the classroom with environmental service learning in the community
- Hands-on science projects in the classroom related to field work and academics
- Learn an appreciation of their community and natural resources while providing tangible benefits
- Earn college scholarship funds for their participation in the ACC
- Learn to practice their role in team management, problem-solving, interpersonal communication and respect
